A SNAPSHOT OF ANTI-LGBTQ HATE AND VIOLENCE DURING PRIDE SEASON 2019

THE STONEWALL REBELLION OF JUNE 1969 was a collective uprising against the police raids and pervasive discrimination, criminalization, and police brutality experienced by members of the lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender and queer (LGBTQ) community in New York City in the 1960s. The first-ever Pride march took place a year later in New York City, ushering in the modern movement for LGBTQ liberation and rights. This year, many Pride celebrations around the country marked June as the 50th anniversary of Stonewall and New York City hosted the international community for a combined Stonewall 50th Anniversary and World Pride celebration.

PROTESTS

In addition to the increased attention and visibility this year, Pride season was also marked by repeated reports of violence in the LGBTQ community. This report outlines some of the incidents and trends of violence documented nationally in the two-month period from May 15 to July 15, 2019. These incidents include a spike in anti-LGBTQ homicides, the deaths of two trans women who died while in custody of the state, targeted threats and attacks, and other incidents of violence aimed at and impacting LGBTQ community members and institutions. As in our report Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual, Transgender, Queer and HIV-Affected Hate and Intimate Partner Violence in 2017 released earlier this year, NCAVP includes all of these incidents as a way to better understand the full scope of violence experienced by LGBTQ people. We present different types of violence alongside each other because they must be examined together in order to more fully understand how violence impacts our communities.

These incidents must be contextualized within a culture of hate that is encouraged by our current federal administration and president. From an increase in the number of legislative attacks on the rights and protections of LGBTQ communities, to an increase in the severity of hate violence against LGBTQ people, our collective struggle continues. While major political and cultural gains have been made by LGBTQ people over the last half century, LGBTQ people are still regular targets of hate violence and LGBTQ people of color, especially Black trans women, are especially impacted. The rapid succession of reports of violence in May and early June contributed to a sense of fear and anger as the height of Pride season approached. For many, the Pride celebrations were displaced and tone deaf to the realities of violence our community continues to experience.

The National Coalition of Anti-Violence Programs (NCAVP) recognizes that this snapshot provides an incomplete narrative of the varied experiences of LGBTQ people during this two month period. Yet, it is our hope that these stories will be used to continue a national conversation on the epidemic of violence against all LGBTQ people.

50 years later, it is clear the work started by the Stonewall rebellion is far from over.

HOMICIDES

NCAVP recorded the homicides of 14 LGBTQ people from May 15 – July 15, 2019, an average of nearly 2 (1.75) homicides each week and more than three times the hate violence homicides recorded between January 1 and May 14, 2019. Eleven of the homicides were hate violence-related. Ten of these victims (91%) were Black and seven (64%) were Black trans women. Of the three intimate partner violence homicides, one victim was a white, gay man, one was a Black woman and one was a white woman who identifies as asexual. The youngest victim was 17 years old, with the majority (86%) of all homicide victims being under the age of 35.

DETENTION-RELATED FATALITIES

In addition to the string of homicides, in June the LGBTQ community lost two trans women of color whose deaths were connected to their incarceration or detention. Johana Medina was an asylum seeker from El Salvador who was HIV-positive. While in ICE detention in Texas, her health deteriorated but after multiple requests for medical attention, she was transferred to a medical facility and then released from ICE's custody. Tragically, she never left the hospital but died there four days later. Layleen Cubilette-Polanco was found dead in her cell while being held at Rikers Island in New York. The medical examiner's office autopsy results determined that she died from a seizure due to epilepsy. Her family and community continue to sound the alarm about the injustices that contributed to her incarceration and the end of her life. These deaths are examples of the inherent violence in U.S. immigration and the criminal legal systems, the systemic criminalization of trans women of color as well as the disproportionate abuses they often experience in these systems.

THREATS AND ATTACKS BY WHITE SUPREMACISTS AND OTHER HATE GROUPS

This Pride season, a number of coordinated actions against the LGBTQ community were organized and carried out by known white supremacist and anti-LGBTQ hate groups. Many of these were direct attacks, threats or other actions aimed at intimidating the community specifically during Pride season. This report summarizes 22 protests at Pride activities, an anti-LGBTQ conference, and an incident in which members of a white supremacist group targeted and assaulted a gay man.

Eighteen of the protests were part of an ongoing campaign to shut down Drag Queen Story Hours (DQSH) across the country, a program that brings drag queens into libraries and other venues to read stories of inclusion to children. Many of the protests were organized by MassResistance, a well known anti-LGBTQ hate group which has put out a call for actions against DQSHs nationally. One person wrote on a popular white supremacist forum, "Put on black clothes grab a Nazi flag, put on some iron cross patches and protest a drag queen story hour in your town or state." In some cases, the protests became violent, and in addition to calling for protests, organizers have urged followers to publish online the identifying information of the drag queens, and in some instances even parents bringing their children to DQSHs, to encourage harassment.

Collectively, all of these incidents demonstrate the growing hostility, backlash, and sinister nature of many of the far right's efforts against the LGBTQ community. Pastor Tommy McMurtry of Liberty Baptist Church in Illinois, said of LGBTQ people in a short video he posted before attending the "Make America Straight Again" conference in Orlando, FL, "There was a time when society, when our country saw them for what they were, and they put them in their place: six feet under. And unfortunately, we have forgotten that in our country."

ADDITIONAL VIOLENT INCIDENTS

NCAVP recorded ten additional incidents of violence during Pride season, including three incidents of vandalism, three incidents of physical assault and one incident of verbal assault.

This Pride season, the LGBTQ community showed its determination to honor the memory of Stonewall by continuing to stand up in the face of discrimination, and for the dignity and safety for all.

COMMUNITY RESPONSE – MOBILIZING IN THE SPIRIT OF STONEWALL

In response to the nearly daily onslaught of violence, over and over, the LGBTQ community along with our allies rallied together to speak out against attacks, defend our spaces, and demand justice for survivors and victims of violence. In May, the homicide of Muhaysia Booker in Dallas led to national attention and outrage as her death came just five weeks after she survived and spoke out against a very public hate violence attack. The tragic death of Layleen Polanco who died while incarcerated in Rikers Island, NY also gained national attention with hundreds rallying on her behalf and a national dialogue beginning about the unjust conditions that led to her incarceration and death.

Supporters repeatedly defended Drag Queen Story Hour (DQSH) in their communities. Most often, supporters far outnumbered protesters as in Albuquerque, NM where 250 supporters were mobilized compared to about six protesters. In Leander, TX, the community came together to save DQSH. After the library cancelled the event, a local church stepped in to host it, booking a conference room in the same library for the event, and drawing a crowd of over 100 supporters.

This Pride season, the LGBTQ community showed its determination to honor the memory of Stonewall by continuing to stand up in the face of discrimination, and for the dignity and safety for all.
